

SpeakOut English Camp - Our Weekly Routine

The week would start with registration and orientation on Saturday. We would cheer as the Hungarian campers entered the room. They would meet their American tutors and begin relationships.

Each day, the Hungarian campers would attend "Morning Class" with Zach. They would see film clips that would raise spiritual issues, learn slang, and practice their English.

After morning class, the campers divided into smaller "SpeakOut" groups where they could practice their conversational English through games, activities and discussing the content of Morning Class.

In the afternoon, the Hungarian campers would meet with their American tutor. They would hear the gospel through the tutor's testimony and a gospel presentation.

One of the special activities was American Culture Night. Katy enjoyed helping teach country line dancing to the Hungarian campers.

Every Tuesday, we would have Sports Day. We had fun playing soccer, basketball, and volleyball with the Hungarian campers. Many of the campers learned how to play softball and American football.

Wednesday night was "Hollywood Night." The campers heard a talk in which the gospel was shared through the topic of heroes. Afterwards, students could participate in discussion groups (pictured above).

The last night of the camp, we were treated to hamburgers, chips and corn on the cob. It was a nice change from the cafeteria food we ate the rest of the week.

The last meeting was always full of energy. Americans and Hungarians enjoyed comedy and lip sync performances, as well as music.

Students That Made a Difference in Our Lives

It was a team effort that led to Tonci (far left) coming to Christ this summer. She came from a religious background but had a lot of questions as she heard the gospel from her tutor, Kenzie (3rd from the left). Kenzie's efforts were supported by two other girls who met with Tonci individually. Anne shared the gospel with Tonci at the end of the week and Tonci made her decision to follow Christ.

Adrienn developed a very special relationship with Katy during the third and final English camp. Adrienn, a Hungarian Christian, was only able to attend one week of the project due to her school schedule. During the week, Adrienn saw 3 Hungarian girls come to Christ as she shared her faith on the beach at the lake. It was the first time that she had seen someone respond to the gospel.

Viktor's worldview did not include God. And yet Jeff did not feel that Viktor was being entirely honest emotionally with the implications of that atheistic worldview.

A team effort helped Viktor to begin to reconsider what he believed as he met with his tutor and had conversations with others like Jeff.

János (John) is someone who really moved Jeff's heart to compassion. János has a very pessimistic view of life. He said that most people misunderstand him based on his appearance. He is very far from God. Jeff prays that one day that János will meet Jesus and see that Jesus makes all things new.

Kenzie (left) and Lauren (right) were the two girls Anne discipled this summer. Both are recent college graduates.
