

Jeff and Anne
Bridgforth

Campus Crusade for Christ

Visit us on the Web: bridgforthfamily.com

October 15, 2008

Why are College Students Strategic?

Praise

• Katy celebrated her 8th birthday in September.

• In April, we asked you to pray about 2 projects Jeff was working on.

Here are the updates:

Version 2 of the Conference Registration Tool went live on August 25. Jeff has received a lot of positive feedback from staff in the field.

As we mentioned last month, the Summer Projects package came together really well. We have also received a lot of encouraging feedback from this project. Thank you for your prayers.

Prayer Requests

• Pray for students who have heard the gospel on campus this Fall. Pray for God's work in their hearts to bring them to Christ.

• Praise God for the students who have come to know Him. Pray that they grow in their walks with Him and that they will tell other students about Jesus.

Launching Point - The decisions made, habits formed, and friendships forged during the college years tend to set the course for their lifetime.

Seeking Identity - They desire significance. College students want to feel part of something bigger. They want their life to count for something and they want a cause to live for.

Active - Students are constantly searching for new ways to get involved with student culture and find a niche. They try many things and are exposed to new organizations, clubs, social groups, classes and professors every semester.

Teachable - They ask questions. They consume information on a rapid level and will put ideas to action with the proper motivation. New challenges tend to provoke curiosity concerning personal purpose, convictions and life goals.

Innovative - The revolution of digital information has radically changed how people learn. Paper books and printed Bible studies have given way to podcasts, short films, text messages and chat forums.

Unfettered - They are free to take incredible risks. They are unfettered by commitments, mortgages, career ladders and kids. They are free to go anywhere the Lord leads.

Globally Connected - They are connected to a global student culture through Facebook, Myspace, Twitter and similar online social networks. They are accessible to their peers -- anywhere, anytime.

Future Leaders - Students are the educated elite that will most likely lead in every domain of society - government, religion, military, education, even sports and entertainment.

This listing is taken from an article by Ken Cochrum, president of the Global Campus Ministry.

For these reasons, and many more, we count it a privilege to partner with you to reach students for Christ and raise them up to reach others, both on their campus and around the world.

Kid's Corner

Pictures (clockwise from top left)

- Katy, Ryan and Lydia ready for church.
- Ryan loves to draw Superheroes. One of his favorites is Batman.
- Last month we told you about the Summer Project Web site that Jeff designed. Katy recently designed her own brochure for Summer Project .
- This is the actual brochure cover used in the Summer Project promotional video (center, left). You can see how closely matched the details.

